Bingham Memorial named ‘Healing Hospital’

Bingham Memorial Hospital has received the Erie Chapman Foundation’s “prestigious Healing Hospital Certification,” a hospital news release said.

The recognition “acknowledges the exceptional quality of the hospital and (its) commitment to continuing to develop and sustain a culture of ‘radical loving care,’” the release said.

The Erie Chapman Foundation also recognized The Mayo Clinic, The Cleveland Clinic, Riverside Methodist Hospital (OhioHealth), and the Baylor Scott & White health systems as examples of peak performing organizations where “radical loving care” is part of the culture.

“Every hospital claims to be healing and caring. But, ‘radical loving care’ asks a harder question: ‘Is every single caregiver someone you would trust taking care of your mother?’” Erie Chapman said in the release. “We call this the ‘mother test’ and it is an extremely difficult standard to reach.”

The Erie Chapman Foundation, based in Nashville, Tenn., is a nonprofit trust set up to advance and support the principles of loving care. The concept of the New Healing Hospital was launched at Nashville’s Baptist Hospital in 2001 when Chapman was its president and CEO.
